Pirate alert by Zorro JH1AT

These days many hams asked me about XZ7A, so I asked the Myanmar Government about it. Today I heard officially from my friend in Myanmar government (Deputy Director General of Post and Telecommunications Department). He kindly checked the information and XZ7A has not been given a permit / license. Currently, there is no valid permit given to ham radio operator, he says. So XZ7A definitely is a pirate.

The story of 3DA0WW by Ed NT2X

Lately, I don't write stories about DXpeditions I wasn't a part of. However, I was invited to join 3DA0WW, alas on a short notice, and had to decline due to business obligations and COVID-induced inconveniences for world travelers. It would have been fun to take a trip to a mysterious South African land-locked country far away. Instead, I offered my assistance to the DX group with their publicity, so the Ham World would know just a bit more about their undertaking. Those of you who followed this story must have seen the photos and operational tidbits I posted.
